Title: My Mother's Pines

GPS: -34.9833592, 117.2299884

I painted the radiata pine trees that my late mother planted on our property nearly 50 years ago. At the time, my father suggested she had planted them too close, but she assured us all that the distancing between the tiny seedlings, was accurate.

Now those little seedlings are huge trees and has created a magnificent, protected pasture and food for the now endangered black cockatoos.

Yes, the trees are now too close and what was supposed to be our entrance driveway is now a magnificent walkway. The splendour of these enormous trees always leaves me in awe and peace.
