This tree at the Lake Towerinning caravan park and lies 70ks east of Collie, a lovely place to visit for some quiet down time.

At the back of the park lies a large area of a salty, mostly dry swamp area where there are a lot of dead trees, short and tall. I have wandered around them with my camera, as to me they were a good art subject, especially against a darkened sky. I'm sure these trees have a story of their own, but now silent reminders of what they once were. In saying so they still hold a beauty of their own.
